

The Milwaukee Irishfest is the largest Irish cultural festival in the United States. The festival has been going on for over 40 years although it was canceled last year due to COVID. This year the festival was only outdoors. In prior years there were many indoor workshops and lectures on Irish culture and crafts. My wife has wanted to go to the festival for several years and we decided to go this year despite the pandemic. She told me I only had to go to the first day but I enjoyed the music so much that I went the second day also. This year the mainstay of the festival was the Irish music and the musicians. The low key nature of the festival allowed me close access to the musicians.
